“WHAT IS OUR RESPONSIBILITY TO THE DEAD AND TO THE LIVING?”

AN OPEN FORUM ABOUT MOVE AND THE PENN MUSEUM

As many of you know, it was revealed last week that the remains of two of the children killed when the City of Philadelphia dropped two bombs on the MOVE compound in 1985 – Tree and Delisha Africa – had been held in the Penn Museum and used for research and teaching. Mike Africa, Jr., a MOVE family member, has circulated a number of demands including the return of the remains to the MOVE family, an apology and appropriate restitution, and the creation of a transparent, public investigation led by a MOVE-approved investigator into how these remains ended up in the Museum’s possession over the past 35 years. The Museum and the University have both issued statements

Still, the questions remain:

WHAT FORMS OF RESPONSE FROM THE PENN CAMPUS COMMUNITY WOULD BE USEFUL AND REPARATIVE IN THIS MOMENT?

CAN OUR INSTITUTIONAL STRUCTURES BE MEANINGFULLY TRANSFORMED, AND HOW?

The Center for Experimental Ethnography will facilitate a dialogue about these questions with Krystal Strong (GSE, Black Lives Matter Philly), who has been working closely with the Africa family and the MOVE community to develop a counter-archive.
